Subject: Re: Duke Postmining Land Use

Paul - those lands have been re-leased by someone who wants to continue the mineral development there. I am going to have them accept the current disturbance under there mine plan. When they file a plan. No more favors for the rock people. And no they are not permitted for a race private track even though that is what they use it for. I will contact the mineral lessee and try to find out what there plans are.

I have some more questions about this and wonder whom I should contact in the surface management group. I'm wanting to find out about the well.

Since Rockland Corporation holds a Modified Grazing permit on these lands post mining use should be for alfalfa. I have not heard that they will use it for a race track, even though they use it for their own recreation. I have no idea what they would want the tank for. In any event this is now in the hands of the Surface management group. What is a frac tank anyway?

What will be the postmining land use for the Duke Mine? I've heard it will be race track, but I've also heard they will plant it for alfalfa. I'm fine with either of these uses, but I need to know.

They're keeping the frac tank, but do you know for what purpose?

Thanks. Paul
